DRYS PREPARE FOR BATTLE IN 1928 ELECTION

Leaders Urge Definite Campaign to Prevent Nomination of Wet

SMITH IS TARGET CENTER

Anti-Saloon League Cohorts Ask Delegates to Refuse Support to Wets

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1927 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington — Dry organizations throughout the country are being urged by their leaders to start a definite campaign at once to prevent the nomination of Governor Al Smith or any other wet who aspires to the presidency.

The plan calls for the selection of local delegates who will pledge themselves to go to the national convention under a binding instruction not to vote for any known wet. It is not intended that the name of any wet shall be cited in the instruction, so that the fight may as far as possible be kept impersonal and on a basis of principle. It is contended, however, that at the moment the outstanding wet is the New York governor and that the work of the drys is primarily to head off this candidacy.

This method of campaigning will mean that presidentialism of the prohibition issue in many states long in advance of the nominating convention. It will afford the wets an opportunity to fight back, urging uninstructed delegates rather than any definite instruction of any kind. The purpose of the dry leaders however is to which have always been dry. The drive a wedge in the southern states speech of William Gibbs McAdoo in Georgia this week was the opening gun in a campaign to make the south to the dry side of the controversy. The anti-Saloon league and other dry organizations have hitherto been successful in applying the lash of political strength as against those members of congress in the south who might be personally wet by conviction but who could not possibly hold office unless they voted dry.

RALLY DRY ELEMENTS

The Anti-Saloon league has had very little opportunity before a national convention to go into individual states and get dry delegates because it usually has been possible to prevent a wet plank by rallying dry elements in several states prospective of the candidates involved.

The drys will enter the next convention, however, with a different situation confronting them. Practically all of the wets will be lined up with Governor Smith and if he should be strong enough to command a majority it would not be difficult to get a middle-of-the-road plank on prohibition instead of the usual brief declaration in favor of law enforcement.

Classified Advertising And the Implement Business

Many implement dealers and farmers have occasion to seek a market for second hand implements and farm machinery. If there are wise they choose the same method as Mr. Albert Kaufman of the Dale Implement Co., Dale, Wis., utilizes—Post-Crescent Classified Ads. From time to time when necessity demands it Mr. Kaufman lists the implements and machinery he wishes to dispose of. In a Classified Advertisement and these powerful little ads usually turn the trick.

Mr. Kaufman says, "I am very well satisfied with the results obtained thru Post-Crescent Classified Ads."

HOME IS WRECKED; MOTHER AND SEVEN CHILDREN UNHURT

Superior—(P)—Additional report of Thursday's severe wind and rain storm trickled into Superior Saturday from upper Wisconsin points as telephone and telegraph service was restored. Escapes from death by falling timbers as houses and barns were blown over, cattle and sheep killed and trees and telephone poles uprooted are reported.

The George Cook family at Leaning, near Cooks, escaped injury when their home was blown over. Seven children and the mother huddled in a corner of the wreckage and the roof was blown off. Later the mother and children walked a half mile through the wind and rain when the storm was at its height to the F. E. Holquist farm for shelter, while the father tried to save the property. One of the horses was killed and a barn blown to pieces.

Den Alexander of Wausau, and Kirby White of Detroit, Mich., were elected trustees of Lawrence college to succeed Herman G. Saecker and Dr. Henry Colman, respectively, who died during the past year at the board of trustees and visitors at the college Friday. Mr. Saecker was secretary on the board. Dr. J. A. Holmes was elected to serve on the executive committee in the place of Carl Mathie of Wausau. The change was made in order to have all members of the committee in Appleton to facilitate attendance at meetings.

All officers of the board were re-elected. They are Lewis M. Alexander of Port Edwards, president; George W. Jones, first vice president; William H. Hutton of New London, second vice president; Dr. James S. Treaver, secretary; James A. Wood, treasurer; Ralph J. Watter, business manager.

RE-ELECT TRUSTEES

Mrs. S. C. Rebeck and George Baldwin were re-elected alumni representatives on the board of trustees. All others whose terms expire in 1927 were re-elected. They are G. W. Jones, James A. Wood, M. A. Westheimer of Kaukauna, Charles S. Boyd, A. F. Tuttle, Henry A. Moehlenbach of Milwaukee, Karl E. Stansbury and John E. Alexander of Port Edwards.

Mrs. Spencer Won't Fight Husband's Divorce Action

New York—(P)—A supreme court order was signed Saturday discontinuing injunction proceedings brought by Mrs. Harold S. Spencer, formerly Isabella Beatty, daughter of Sir James and Lady Beatty of London to compel her husband, Harold S. Spencer, to abandon his divorce action begun in Appleton, Wis.

Supreme Court Justice Engelhard had granted Mrs. Spencer an injunction restraining her husband from pushing the suit in Wisconsin on the grounds that both she and her husband were residents of New York.

599 MILLION SURPLUS NOW IN TREASURY

Coolidge Warns Nation That Tax Cut Hangs on Keeping Expenses Down

Washington—(P)—While declaring the administration is steadily working to save the way for further lowering of the public debt and of taxes, President Coolidge warned Friday night that hope of further tax reduction was futile unless federal expenditures were held approximately to their present level.

Speaking before the semi-annual budget meeting of heads of government departments, the president said that a surplus of $599,000,000 was certain for the present fiscal year ending June 30, and estimated that the surplus for next year would reach $335,000,000.

As a guide to the future, he said, however, that this year's surplus was of doubtful value, because it included a number of extraordinary receipts that could not be counted on for more than a limited period. He cited among these extraordinary items delayed income tax payments, railroad receipts, the capital stock tax and collections from farm loans bonds.

CONSIDER SEVERAL YEARS

"In considering the possibility of tax reduction," he said, "we must keep in mind that our revenue laws cannot be written from the standpoint of a single year, but must be expected to yield adequate revenue over a period of years. It is essential therefore to discount temporary and non-recurring items and to base the estimated revenue on those resources which can be looked upon as essentially permanent in character."

"We have no fear our present revenue laws will not produce ample income to carry on the business of the government. But this does not justify an enlargement of our expenditure program. Rather does it dictate and demand that we make renewed effort to keep within our present expenditures. One thing is certain. Unless we succeed in holding expenditures at about their present level, hope of further tax reduction will be gone."

"In the face of each of the three reductions in taxes since the fiscal year 1921 we have continued to accumulate surpluses at the end of each year. We should not overlook, however, the great influence these surpluses have had in making tax reduction possible. Their application to the further reduction of the public debt has permanently reduced our interest charges. It has been an investment for the people of their own money. In the business of government, as in private business, the time to liquidate indebtedness is in the time of prosperity. The reduction of fixed charges serves a twofold purpose. It materially assists in maintaining prosperity and would be particularly helpful in adversity."

SAVINGS NEAR LIMIT

Discussing the benefits of the budget system the president said that "elimination of non-essentials and direct savings have about reached their limit."

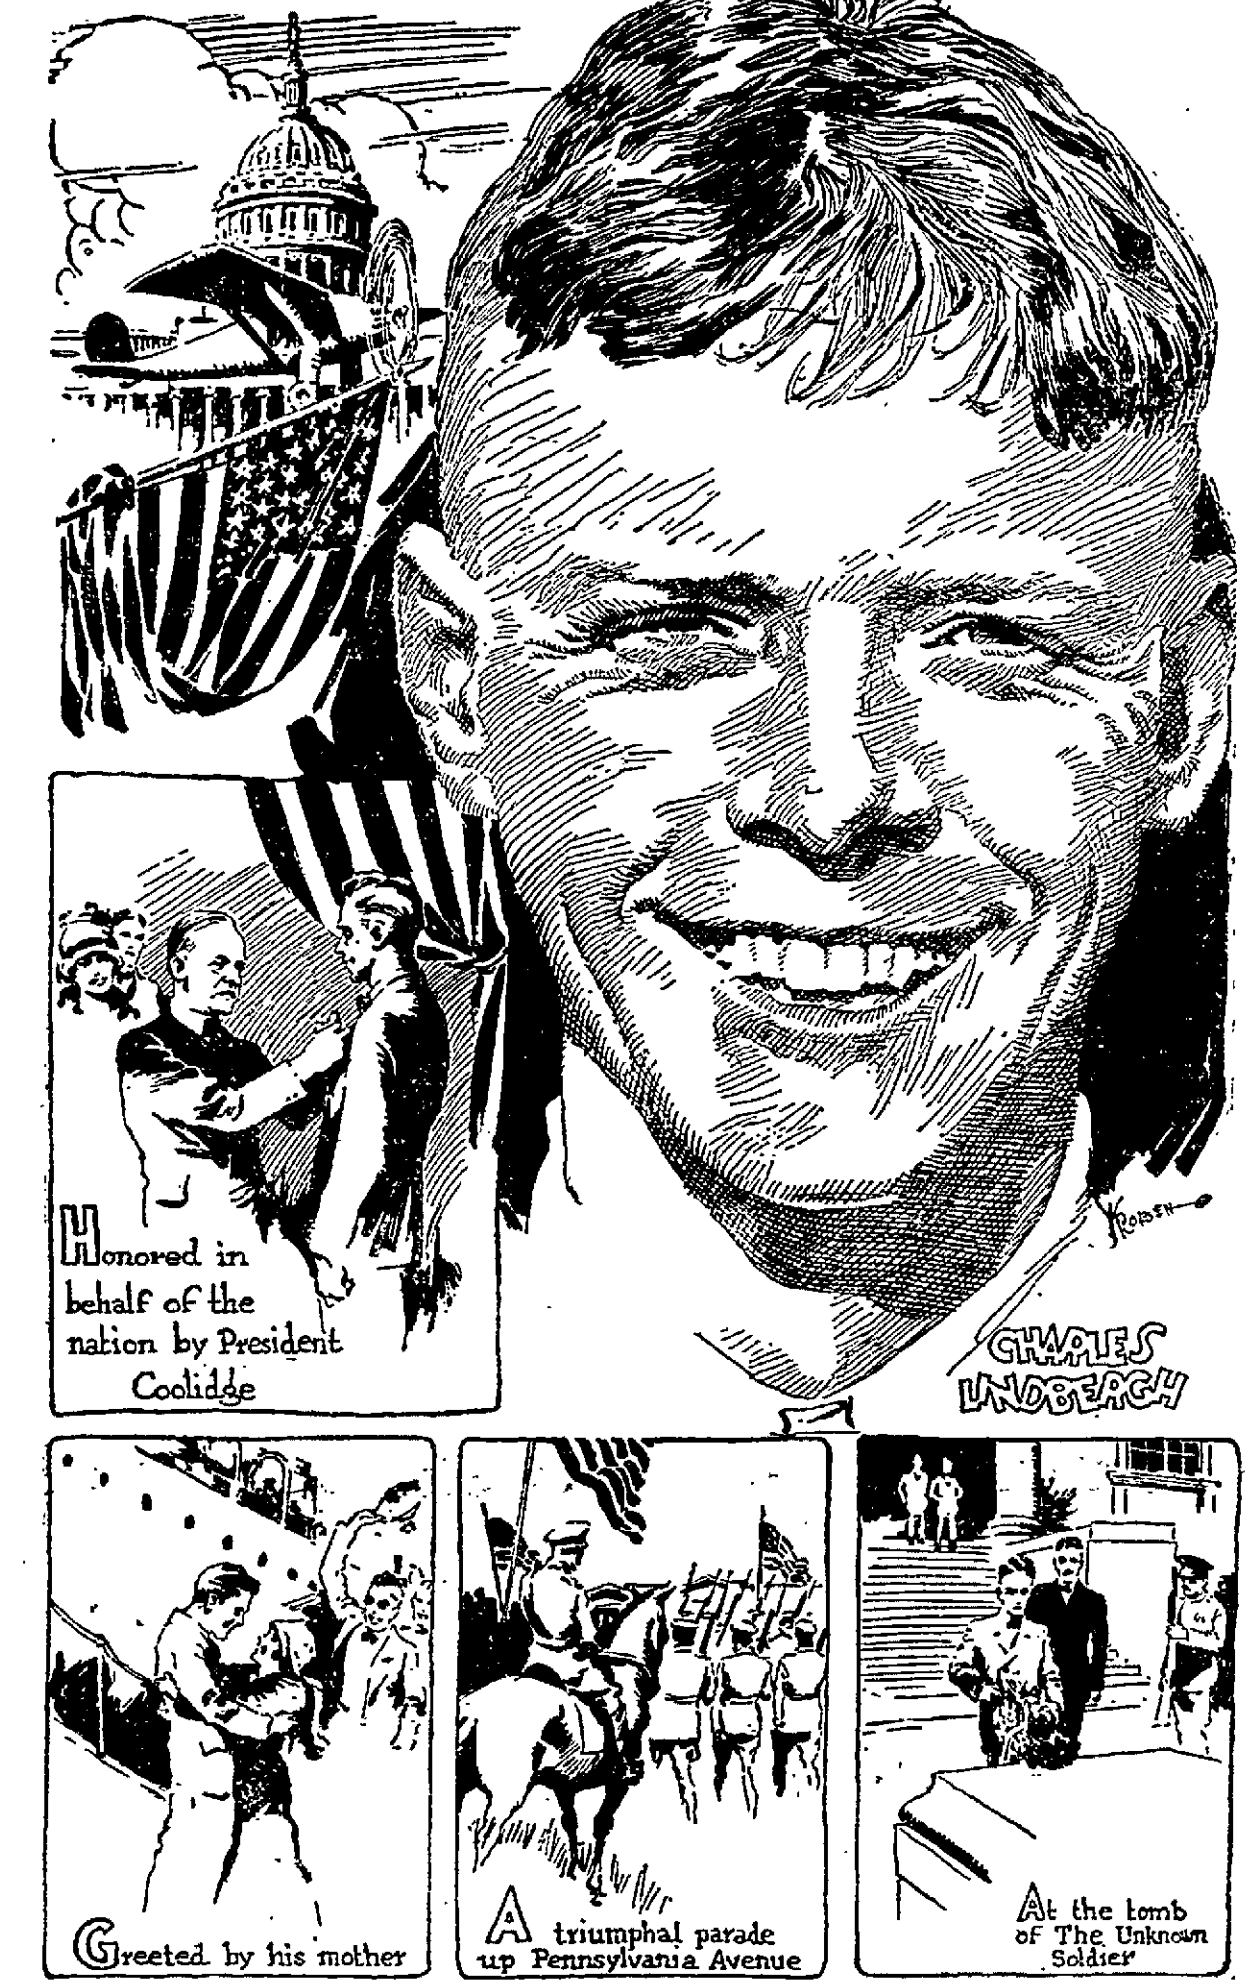

"We are striving as always to pave the way for further reduction of debt and of taxes," he said. "This in itself necessitates unremitting effort to hold the level of our expenditure program. After a careful study of our probable financial condition in 1927, it is my desire that the estimates of appropriations for that year be held within a total of $2,500,000,000. This is a reduction of the total of the fiscal year 1926, and it includes the postal service, and tax refunds. This maximum has not been fixed arbitrarily. It is the result of careful study of probable financial conditions in 1927."

Referring to the Mississippi valley flood, Mr. Coolidge said that "all that possibly can be done to alleviate distress and suffering is being done."

BIRGER EX-LIEUTENANT ADMITS MURDER BY GANG

Nashville, Ill.—(P)—Art Newman, former lieutenant of Charles Birger, southern Illinois gang leader, testified before the Washington grand jury Saturday that he was with Birger and other gangsters when he asserted, they abducted and murdered Lory L. Whole Nation Honors Lindbergh

Germans Load Two Fliers With All Kinds Of Gifts

Berlin—(P)—Clarence Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine, although hailed as heroes for their trans-Atlantic flight, are in Germany illegally and will probably be in the same outlaw status in all the European countries they visit unless they can find time amidst the round of entertainments to procure the necessary papers. Levine has a passport, but no visas. Chamberlin said Saturday:

"I have no passport, and I don't want one." Levine remarked, however, that no one had yet asked for a passport and he doubted if anybody would.

Chamberlin's bedroom in the American embassy is full of gifts of bottled beer, light wines, cokes, steins and loving cups, but in order to correct any erroneous impression that might be gathered from this, Chamberlin emphasized that while he likes an occasional single glass of beer, when at home he does not drink at all. Levine voiced similar sentiments.

FIRE DRIVES GUESTS FROM CHICAGO HOTEL

Chicago—(P)—The fashionable Drake hotel, which had Lake Michigan and the gold coast for near neighbors, had a fire early Saturday which sent 1,000 dancers, diners and guests rushing from its doors.

The flame under a chafing dish in the hands of a hurrying waiter lapped out and touched one of the paper decorations, which hung in profusion about, and before it could be extinguished the fire had spread through the east terrace—a low ceiling ballroom. Two hundred dancers converged at the east terrace exits. Several were slightly hurt. The smoke rolled into the adjoining French room and 400 diners, mostly Northwestern university alumni celebrating college night, were driven into the lobby.

COOLIDGE PINS FLYING CROSS ON "UNSPOILED" WORLD HERO

Hundred Thousand Shout Acclaim as Cal Praises "Illustrious Citizen"

LAUDS CONDUCT ABROAD

Calls Ace "Conqueror of Air—Strengthener of Ties With Europe"

Washington—(P)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was welcomed home Saturday by President Coolidge as "an illustrious citizen of our republic, a conqueror of the air and strengthener of the ties which bind us to our sister nations across the sea."

Concluding his brief address of welcome the president bestowed upon Lindbergh the distinguished flying cross "as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and what he has done."

Praising the young aviator's conduct abroad where he was acclaimed by kings and rulers, Mr. Coolidge declared "the absence of self-acclaim, the refusal to become commercialized, which has marked the conduct of his sincere and genuine exemplar of fine and noble virtues, has endeared him to every one."

CONQUEROR "UNSPOILED"

"He has returned unspoiled," the president said. "He has brought his unsullied fame home."

President Coolidge reviewed the history of aviation up to the successful crossing of the Atlantic by Lindbergh. He paid tribute to the aviator's parents, saying his father "moved with a desire for public service, was a member of congress," and called attention to the fact that "his mother, who dowered her son with his own modesty and charm, is with us today."

Eulogizing Colonel Lindbergh, President Coolidge told of his career that was climaxed by his lone crossing of the Atlantic.

"On the morning just three weeks ago yesterday this wholesome, earnest, fearless courageous product of America rose into the air from Long Island in a monoplane, christened the Spirit of St. Louis in honor of his home and that of his supporters. It was no haphazard adventure. After months of most careful preparation, supported by a valiant character, driven by an unconquerable will and inspired by the imagination and the spirit of his viking ancestors, this officer set wing across the dangerous stretches of the north Atlantic. He was alone. His destination was Paris."

TRIUMPH IS PERFECT

"Thirty-three hours and thirty minutes later, in the evening of the second day, he landed at his destination. He had traveled over 3,600 miles and established a new and remarkable record. The execution of his project was a perfect exhibition of art."

"This country will always remember the way in which he was received by the people of France, by their president and by their government. It was the more remarkable because they were mourning the disappearance of their intrepid countryman, who had tried to span the Atlantic on a western flight."

"Our messenger of peace and good will had broken down another barrier of time and space and brought two great peoples into closer communion."

WELCOME FOR PEOPLE

"And now my fellow citizens, this young man has returned. He is here. He has brought his unsullied fame home. It is our great privilege to welcome back to his native land on behalf of his people, who have a deep affection for him, a people thrilled by his splendid achievement."

"A colonel of our republic, a conqueror of the air and strengthener of the ties which bind us to our sister nations across the sea, as president of the United States, I bestow the distinguished honor."

landing place where she stood as final adjustments were made, and then walked aboard as Lindbergh himself was escorted below deck. There their meeting followed.

When the signal finally was given for Mrs. Lindbergh to board the ship, she walked briskly to the gang plank and once aboard, she walked to the admiral's cabin where Lindbergh had preceded her.

MEET IN PRIVATE

What passed between after Mrs. Lindbergh boarded the ship remains hidden in the privacy of their own memories. Shortly after Mrs. Lindbergh boarded the ship the Memphis fired a salute.

On leaving the ship, Lindbergh seized his mother in his arms and virtually had to fight his way through the crowd to get to the automobile assigned to the two for the trip to the monument grounds.

As Lindbergh stepped briskly down the cruisers gangplank the crowd pressed upon him yelling "Lindy, Lindy." Many tried to seize his hands. Lindbergh in civilian clothes was flushed of face and his hair was disheveled as he pleaded with his admirers to let him pass. Struggling all the way, assisted by the White House aides, marines and ship officers, he finally reached the touring car. He took a place in the back seat with his mother. The top of the car

RADIO FANS TO HEAR COHAN SING IN PRAISE OF AVIATOR

New York—(P)—George M. Cohan, will make his radio debut at 8:30, standard time Saturday night with what he regards as his crowning achievement in song. He expects to make no money from it and has been giving away orchestral arrangements.

"He's a coming. He's a coming! Hear the drumming: Run-Tum-tum-tum-tum. Oh say! What a day from Gotham to Nome. When Lindy comes back from across the foam, To his home, sweet home!"

LINDY GETS MEDAL

Washington Monument Ground—(P)—As conqueror of the air over the Atlantic and ambassador of good will, Charles A. Lindbergh received Saturday from the hands of President Coolidge a distinguished flying cross, the highest award of the American air service.

The ceremony crowned a reception such as the nation's capital never before had given to any person no matter what his rank, status or accomplishment.

As the chief executive pinned the bronze medal, the first to be struck off, on the lapel of the blue sack coat of the world's hero, a mighty roar went up from the thousands upon thousands who were massed in the broad expanse of park surrounding the towering granite shaft erected to the memory of the first president.

Secretary Davis of the war department, handed the cross to President Coolidge in a blue box and the president pinned it to the lapel below the French decoration of the legion of honor.

Then the two shook hands and Lindbergh advanced to the microphone to reply. The crowd stopped him with a roaring demonstration. When he had quieted them, leaning forward, and with both hands holding to the stand, he made his speech of thanks slowly and distinctly.

"LINDY" THANKS NATION

"On the evening of the twenty-first of May, last, I started at Le Bourget, France," he said. "During the week I spent in France, the day in Belgium and the short period in London and England the people of France and the people of Europe requested that I bring back to the people of America one message from the people of France and the people of Europe. At every gathering, at every meeting I attended were the same words:

"You have seen the affection of the people of France and the people of Europe for the people of America demonstrated to you." Here the speech was broken by a thundering moment of applause. Then Lindbergh continued his quotation of the message from the people of France and the people of Europe saying:

"Demonstrated to you. Upon your return to your country, take back with you this message from France and Europe to the United States of America. I thank you."

RETURN TO WHITE HOUSE

The crowd cheered and cheered and President Coolidge shook hands with Lindy again. Then the bank struck up an air and the president and Mrs. Coolidge took Lindbergh and his mother away in White House cars to the White House guests until they leave Washington.

A great crowd gathered about Du Pont circle in front of the temporary White House, yelled so insistently for their hero that he came out on a balcony and bowed his acknowledgments, meantime postponing an already laid luncheon with the president.

Mr. Coolidge, Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Lindbergh also appeared on the balcony. The quartet remained in view for several minutes, and all the while the crowd shouted its approval lustily.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS IN LARGEST GATHERING

WON'T ERECT NEW LIGHTS IN PIERCE PARK THIS SUMMER

Temporary System Will Have to Serve for Time Being, Board Decides

The temporary lighting system in Pierce park with several short extensions will have to serve next summer, members of the park board decided Thursday afternoon. While it is evident that a large part of the park will be unlighted, the park commissioners felt that it should go on in adopting an ornamental lighting system. They felt that extensive study of the needs and conditions in the park should take place before any plans are drawn or approved.

There is a connection from the main line to the old band stand which probably will be extended to the new band pavilion and the rest rooms. Most of the park proper will be unlighted.

Plans for a celebration to commemorate the completion of the improvement of the park were discussed but nothing definite was done. The board will take this matter up later. It is expected that the park improvement program will be completed about July 15.

Clubs or organizations desiring to hold picnics in the parks are requested by the commissioners to get in touch with Philip Kreutzer, park superintendent. Many times these people communicate with members of the board, it was pointed out, but the park commissioners do not keep a record of picnics and do not know what dates are open.

Mr. Kreutzer keeps a list of picnics to be held during the year. Park board members wish to encourage people to hold picnics, but conflict of parties could be prevented by getting in touch with the park superintendent it was pointed out.

WAPV MOTORISTS TO BUY LICENSES

Secretary of State Advises Police Chiefs and Sheriffs to Arrest Delinquents

Madison—Many Wisconsin motorists are delinquent because they may not know their license without license plates. The first of May was the deadline date for license application for 1927. Since then, the Secretary of State's office reports that motorists are ignoring the vehicles without license plates. As a result of delinquency among motorists in obtaining licenses, the Secretary of State has received numerous complaints from chiefs of police and sheriffs from various parts of the state who wish to know what action should be taken in these cases.

The Secretary of State declared that the license plates are the property of the state and that it is the duty of every motorist to have a license plate on his automobile and that it is the duty of every motorist to make arrests when proper license plates are applied for on license plates and by the auto-owners.

EXERCISE CARE IN REMOVING STAINS FROM FURNITURE

Ignorance on Part of Housewife May Spoil Chairs or Davenport

Many people spill liquids on upholstered furniture, damaging the set because they do not know how to remove the stain, according to R. L. Feuerstein, of the Feuerstein Upholstering Shop, 1509 N. Richmond. Great care should be exercised in removing stains and directions should be followed explicitly, he pointed out. Clean sponges, cloths or tufts of absorbent cotton always should be employed—gently and with patience. The soiled part should first be brushed to remove any superficial dirt. Apply the cleanser with a gentle, circular motion, extending from the rim to the center of the stain. Immediately apply a soft blotter to take up the surplus cleanser and wash the spot with distilled water. The surplus water should be blotted up and the spot sponged with alcohol to prevent the formation of rings. With sponges, it is well to apply a coating of talcum powder, over the alcohol to permit it to dry thoroughly before removing, according to Mr. Feuerstein.

"I have followed this method for years in my work and find it gives excellent results," Mr. Feuerstein said. The Feuerstein shop does all kinds of upholstery work, including rebuilding and recovering furniture, and repairs work on all types of recovering material are kept on hand. Some of these are tapestries, velours, velvets, mohair fabrics, Damasks, artificial and real leathers, cretonnes, corduroys, figured hair cloth, slip cover fabrics, figured denims, plain denims, muslins, cambrics. Samples often are taken to the customers homes so that material that will match color scheme and wall decorations or rugs can be chosen.

Many people do not use ordinary precaution in caring for their upholstered furniture, and as a result the sets and single pieces wear out before they ordinarily would. From his experience Mr. Feuerstein has drawn a set of don'ts which the housewife will be greatly benefited by if she makes them the rule in her home. They are:

- Don't use furniture polishes, oils or varnishes on upholstery leather because they cause it to become sticky and lose its lustre. Damp cloth and castile soap should be used, the leather should be rinsed with a second damp cloth and polished with a clean dry cloth.
- Don't forget moths lay eggs under slip covers. In cleaning covers should be removed and dusted.
- Don't use a carpet beater on upholstered furniture. A vacuum cleaner will remove the dust.
- Don't fail to remove loose cushions occasionally and run the hand in the space between the back and the seat. The usual collections of keys, coin purses, etc., which will result do no harm but foodstuffs often are found which are subject to decay.
- Don't sit on spring arms, stand or kneel on spring edge seats. Although this practice will show little effect on a well built piece of furniture, it constitutes an abuse and should be avoided.
- Don't use the vacuum cleaner on down filled cushions as it has a tendency to pull the feathers through the cover. A careful brushing will suffice.
- Don't allow household pets to lie on upholstered furniture. They may not only soil it, but cats especially, will ruin the cover with their clawing.

CITY SEEKS BIDS FOR NEW FIVE-TON TRACTOR

Scaled bids for a five-ton tractor, for furnishing labor and materials for sidewalks to be constructed in the city and for coal and oil fuel for heating the city building next winter will be received by E. L. Williams, city clerk, up to 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June 15. The bids will be opened at the council meeting the same night and if satisfactory the contracts will be awarded at that time.

The new tractor is to take the place of a tractor belonging to the street department which is worn out. This tractor is used during the summer to roll the scarifier, the machine which tears up streets preparatory to putting them. The old machine has been in service for many years and is no longer fit for heavy work. In the winter the tractor is used with a snow plow. It is planned to trade the old tractor in as part payment on the new machine.

PROUD AND HAPPY TODAY

Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh was proud and exceedingly happy today when she greeted her hero son, Colonel Charles Lindbergh on the U. S. cruiser Memphis as it arrived at Washington. Mrs. Lindbergh was the guest of President and Mrs. Coolidge while she awaited the arrival of her son in Washington.

Lindbergh Beau Ideal Of Every Youth, Woman Says

BY MRS. MILTON BRONNER
London—There is not a wife or mother in the United States who should not envy the widowed school teacher mother of Charles Lindbergh. Not because of something else—the character of our air hero.

This young, tall, blue-eyed chap is just the beau ideal of what every American mother wishes her son to be. He is the kind we all thing is peculiarly rare of American soil and American breeding.

POISE, TACT AND MODESTY
Snatched from semi-obscurety and hurled into a dazzling light that excels that which beats upon a throne, he has carried himself with a poise, tact and modesty that could only come from reserve within.

Came with me and watch his demeanor as he is beset by two dozen heckling British reporters, who have heard that all Americans are talkative and expansive and who think he may produce some "cracks" which will make good copy.

To get this picture straight, remember that no British reporter would ever dream of asking a Briton what the King said to him and what he said to the King—if the monarch thus honored one of his "subjects" with a private interview lasting a half-hour.

SPARING OF WORDS
But these newspaper people found their match. Lindbergh is a man of action. Therefore, he is as sparing of his words as a miser is of golden coins.

The questions rained:
"What did the King say to you?"
"What did you say to the King?"
"What did you think of our sovereign?"

"What did you think of our Queen?"
Each and all of these questions was blocked by a frown or an incredulous glance or an enigmatic smile.

"Did you sit down or stand up while you were with the King?"
The sphinx spoke:
"Oh, I stood up part of the time and sat down part of the time."

On another persistent one:
"When you were with the Prince of Wales you did not have to be so formal. What happened?"
"He talked some and I talked some."

DISAPPROVING BRITISHER
There was one nice Englishman standing next to me who did not approve of these very personal questions. So I said to him:
"It is a shame to barge him that way."

Captain Lindbergh overheard me. He also recognized by my accent that I was a fellow American. And he turned upon me a grateful glance which seemed to say:
"You spoke a mouthful then, Missus."

The questions switched to his remaining program for London. One of the events was his attendance at the huge Derby ball at Albert Hall.

"Are you going to dance, Captain?" I queried. Sharp as the report from a gun came the emphatic reply:
"No!"

WHAT HE MEANT
It was accompanied by a tightening of the lips as he should say: "That's where I draw the line."

"Some of those pretty girls will be cruelly disappointed," I ventured. His answer was his famous million-dollar smile.

"What are your plans for the United States?" somebody asked. "Haven't made any."

He was reminded that he was to be at a certain place at 9 o'clock. "Eight-fifty," he corrected tersely. Lindbergh is the soul of promptness. All through his wonderful two weeks in Europe he prided himself on reaching every place on the scheduled dot, whether by plane, boat or car.

A TIRED BOY
When the interview was finally over, a look of intense relief came into his tired eyes. For the boy is tired. No other human being in recent history has gone through so many kinds of experiences in three weeks as has this child.

I've got a personal hunch of my own that he was very happy to be settled homeward on our American war vessel and away from the crowd—incessant crowds. And I've got another hunch that most of the time he was found somewhere, exactly talking machinery with a he-man.

For he's a he-man, too. He's no matinee idol.

ELLSWORTH YOUTH WINS CUP AS BEST ALL AROUND SENIOR

Lawrentians Receive Honors at Annual Class Day Program on Campus

Gordon Clapp of Ellsworth, was awarded the Spector cup as being the best "all around" senior student of outstanding ability and having a scholastic average above the college average at the annual class day exercises for seniors at Lawrence college Saturday. The program was on the college campus. The Hyde medal was given Walter Heideman of Appleton, chosen as the best all around athlete with a good scholarship average.

The Spector cup winner was selected by a vote of faculty and students. In the primary elections the four high school students were Miss Helen Diderich of Appleton, Roy Sund of Neenah, Gordon Clapp and Lois Manchester of Racine. John Barnett of Neenah, won the cup last year.

Mr. Clapp recently was appointed acting personnel director at the college in the absence of Miss Ellen Turtan next year. He has been active in the college, is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, a member of the Mace, Phi Delta Epsilon, men's journalism fraternity, was editor of the college yearbook in his junior years, and has participated in other campus activities.

A senior loan fund of $200 was announced as a gift from the class. It will be given to some senior student who needs financial help next year.

Juniors chosen by the senior class as being the most representative members of their group were Miss Mary Morton and Lael Westberg, both of Marinette. The spade which is now awarded to the "all around" junior girl was originally given to the most studious boy, the "digger." The spoon in the beginning was awarded to the ugliest junior, then to the boy making and breaking the most hearts. It now is given to the boy chosen as the most active in many fields of campus activities. It was explained in the announcement.

Morning, Evening Are Best Times For Fishing

BY R. A. CLAPLIN
How exasperating it is when you are on a trout stream and can hardly get enough fish to grease the pan. It happens to all of us at times, especially so far as the big ones are concerned. You know they are there but you can't get them to hit your fly or other lure. You can look at them occasionally but that is all. That will happen only when you present something that comes nearest to interesting them. They will make a rush at your lure and roll over as if actually mistaking it. That is not the case. A trout never misses his prey if he really wants it. That would show an error in nature, and that never occurs.

There are various reasons why trout do not bite at certain times. Some of the reasons we know, but not all of them. Usually the best times of the day are from about 8 o'clock in the morning until noon, and from 4 o'clock until dark. However, those periods apply only to the daylight fishermen. The best time to get the big specimens is after darkness has fallen. They are on the feed in the dark hours and that means if you offer them the right lure they will hit it viciously. It is a midge fly, or a three inch chub fly.

Last week we fished the main Wolf River above Big Eddy. I knew there were fish in the stream, and good ones, but could not get a rise from a fly one even though I tried more than 20 different patterns of flies and lures. It was simply an off day. Conditions looked favorable but the fish were not feeding. Perhaps the frequent rains have washed too much natural food into the stream. If that was the case, whoever is lucky enough to be at that particular point on the Wolf following a dry spell of say, two weeks, should get some of those junkers. When I go there again I shall be prepared to try for them after dark, and I am satisfied I won't be disappointed.

One of the finest spots on this grand river for big trout is at Big Smoky Falls, but there the Indians get the big rainbows after dark. They told us of frequently seeing one leap below the falls, which would measure at least two feet in length, but so far, no one has been able to land him.

The view downstream from the high rustic bridge at Big Smoky is alone well worth a visit. It is one of the real, wild spots of beauty left to us in Wisconsin, and this together with Big Eddy, Sullivan Falls and others equally as picturesque, the Isaak Waitons and other clubs are fighting hard to save for posterity.

NEENAH PROUD OF
NEW BRIDGES OVER
RIVERS AND CANALS

First Crossing Over River
Was Crude Affair Built
Many Years Ago

Neenah—Officials and townspeople here believe the new bridges across the Fox River, dedicated today are among the handsomest in Wisconsin and are one of the most important improvements on Federal Highway 41 in Wisconsin.

Bridges over the Fox river date back to when the city was a village of only a few hundred inhabitants and the river banks extended as far south as the Anspach store site. The first bridges rough log structures over which the teams hauled grain to the flour mills which were the first manufacturing plants located where the present Kimberly-Clark and other modern plants now stand. The first bridge was a crude affair, placed on cribs filled with stones. This bridge was replaced in 1873 during the term of William Kellogg as mayor, by what was known to older residents, as the "old red bridge." This sufficed until 1884 during the term of George A. Whiting as mayor of the city, when the iron bridge was erected at a cost of $27,346. This was thought to be one of the finest iron bridges in the state. It was believed that bridge was answer all purposes for hundreds of years.

In the spring of 1923, during the second year of J. H. Denhardt's first term as mayor, the bridge project was again brought before a meeting of the council. It had been reported that the iron bridge which had been in constant service for 39 years with little if any repairs was made. The state was asked to investigate and the office of the state engineer was asked to report on the condition of the bridge. With this report before it the council of 1923 took the first steps toward securing the new structure which is being dedicated at this time. State surveys were ordered here as the longer bridge of the three extends over government water and part of the expense had to be borne by the state. During the following two years George E. Schindler was at the head of the city's affairs. The initial steps had been taken and the project had to go on. Alderman William Schmidt, Jr. of the fifth ward, who was at all times a booster for a new bridge, kept the project well before the council at its meetings. Finally the state called a series of investigation meetings to ascertain the need of a new bridge and to what extent the state would give aid toward a new structure. Neenah was third on the waiting list for state aid, but the Marinette-Menominee bridge project was laid over on account of interstate interference, which placed Neenah second and it was not long before the city was notified that the state decided to help place a bridge over the Fox river. This report spurred the council to seek aid from Wisconsin and to secure estimates and plans. On April 23, 1926 a contract was signed by Mayor J. H. Denhardt, who had been re-elected mayor, for the two smaller bridges over the north and south canals. Within a week the Vausau Iron Works whose bid of $22,008.25 was accepted by the board of public works, began tearing down the old iron bridge and erecting a new one. The new bridge is a few hundred feet west of the old one and extends a few hundred feet west of the intersection of Wisconsin and Commercial streets resurfaced with cement and new walks were built on both sides of the street. An ornamental light system was installed at a cost of $15,000. The light poles were erected jointly by the city and the Wisconsin Traction, Light Heat and Power company.

The three new bridges are 291 feet long. The bridges are 66 feet wide with a 44 foot roadway. An eight foot walk extends along both sides. The bridges, while not entirely completed until Friday afternoon, were opened for traffic on May 29.

While the bridges were under construction the American Legion post petitioned the council to designate them as memorials for the men who had served in the wars of the United States. The petition was granted and during the dedication ceremonies Saturday bronze tablets were unveiled by the Legion. Another bronze tablet on the bridge bears the names of J. H. Denhardt as mayor, William Schmidt, Jr., John Ship, O. W. Jones, H. G. Larson and S. W. Marley of the board of public works, and E. C. Arneson, Louis Henrich, E. M. Marten and L. C. Miller, committee on streets, highways and bridges under whose supervision the bridges were constructed. A table bearing the names of the state highway commission is placed on one of the pillars of the structure.

BRIDGES FORMALLY DEDICATED WHEN
GOVERNOR SPEAKS

Elaborate Program of Music and Talks Takes Place This Afternoon

Neenah, Wis.—(AP)—Governor Fred R. Zimmerman Saturday congratulated this city's people for "enterprise, hospitality" in a special dedicating the new bridge over the Fox river.

He told how "in the good old days" towns were surrounded by water and bridges were used only by the inhabitants and as a means of keeping the enemy from the gates and drew comparison of the modern town, with traffic arteries built into it for the express purpose of inviting the stranger into the locality.

"We congratulate you on another score," he said, "on your commendable forethought to dedicate this beautiful and useful structure in grateful commemoration of the patriotic services of the soldiers and sailors who sacrificed their lives to the welfare of their kin and their country. These departed heroes would approve your plan to immortalize them by constructing this useful bridge."

Neenah—The three new bridges over the Fox river on Highway 41, were formally dedicated at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon by Governor Fred R. Zimmerman who gave the principal address of an interesting program arranged by the city council committee and a committee of the American Legion. While the bridges were completed only Friday afternoon, they were thrown open on June 23 for traffic. The official opening followed the afternoon program when the ribbons guarding the south approach were cut by Miss Elenora Denhardt, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. J. H. Denhardt.

At noon a series of bombs were set off as a prelude to the afternoon and evening program. From the explosion of the first bomb until midnight there will be something doing as the merchants of Neenah have joined with the city in an effort to entertain the thousands of visitors. While the governor gave the principal address, short talks were given by Mayor Denhardt under whose administration the bridges were built, D. J. Kenny West Bond state commander of the Legion; Lt. Col. F. J. Schindler, Legion commander of the First district and members of the state and Winnebago-co highway commission.

The governor and his party arrived from Madison shortly after 1 o'clock and were met at the Valley Inn where an informal reception was held until 1:30 when a luncheon was served to about 100 state, county and city officials and citizens of the valley. At the governor's table were state officials, including the highway commission, the Winnebago-co highway commission and members of the Neenah city council. The ladies were served in one of the smaller dining rooms. A short program of informal talks was carried out after luncheon after which the governor met the Legion and soldiers of the Civil and Spanish American wars who were his escorts to the speaker's stand which had been erected in the center of the long bridge.

The city's part of the program, with exception of the dance in the evening, ended with the dedication after which the merchants and manufacturers took charge and started the entertainment features with a concert by the Holton-Elkhorn band on the platform erected at the corner of Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st. Four high class vaudeville acts brought here from Chicago, will be seen on the main platform on Wisconsin-ave and Commercial-st. during the evening. The feature of the evening will be the parade by the military organizations, Legion, Boy Scouts, Boy Brigade, societies and clubs and the merchants and manufacturers who will be represented by floats. The parade will occupy about an hour after which there will be dancing on the bridge to music of the Appleton Military band until midnight.

Among the speakers in the afternoon at the dedication exercises was George A. Whiting who was mayor in 1885 and 1884 when the old iron bridge, which gave way for the new cement structure, was erected at a cost of $27,346.

Britains Must Toast King Before Smoking

BY MILTON BRONNER
London—The Europeans have all kinds of little quirks and oddities and customs that howl over a plain simple American way of doing things.

For instance: not long ago an American, a fine fellow of good family, irreproachable manners, plenty of money, abundance of culture, and considerable knowledge of the world, was invited to a great English house to dinner. It was very formal. It was more than a meal. It was almost a banquet. Things went swimmingly until the American suddenly felt the need of a smoke. He had a cigarette with him. He was used to smoking an occasional cigarette during the course of a big meal. So he pulled out his cigarette case and offered one to his neighbor, a haughty old dame with a nose almost as long as her pedigree and a mouth almost as thin as her war-depleted purse. She refused, her nose seeming to reel longer and her lips thinner. The American proceeded to light up. Then he noticed something frigid in the atmosphere. The thermometer dropped as suddenly as it does in Chicago when a blizzard sweeps across from Lake Michigan. Conversation seemed to cease. When it was constrainedly resumed, he seemed left out of it. When the party finally broke up and goodbys were being said, many of the guests seemed near-sighted. They didn't see him. And all the way back to his hotel in his taxi the American, in a bewildered state, wondered what he had done. He had made no raw cracks. He had nibbled no Maxim silencer on his soup spoon. He had not jugged with his penis. He had not playfully dropped a lump of ice down some woman's back.

It was only weeks later that an American, who had lived in England for a while broke the news to him. He had committed a terrible social crime. For one of the iron customs of the English is that at a formal dinner or a banquet you simply do not smoke until the toast to the health of the king has been given and duly drunk!

In this connection a story is told of the Prince of Wales. He was the chief guest at a big dinner. The people were dull and the speeches had been duller. H. T. H. greatly needed refreshment in the shape of a cigarette. Whereupon he is reported to have turned to the chairman and said:

"For goodness sake, hurry up and toast the king so I can have a smoke!"

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

By Drew Austin

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX and WINNIE SHELTON are chosen by T. Q. CURTIS, millionaire department store owner, from his establishment to enter his home as wards for one year because he wants to help them further ambitions each has expressed. Billy, ambitious to be a concert violinist, is the only one of the three that is serious. The other two lie to enjoy T. Q.'s generosity. Billy is infatuated with DAL ROMANINE, nephew of MRS. MEADOWS, his hostess. She is constantly troubled by the fear that he is "playing" her and that he is "playing" her. Everything, however, she tenderly remembers CLAY CURTIS, son of her benefactor, who has disinherited himself and is living with Billy's mother in the poor part of town, working in the Truman factory by day and writing music at night.

Unknown to T. Q., the girls learn he intends to adopt one of them when their year is up and that Nyda will inherit a series of intrigues for his affection.

Billy loses interest in her music and finally has a breakdown. T. Q. is disappointed in Nyda's treatment of some children placed under her care in a kindergarten room he has fitted for her, because she has expressed a desire to be a teacher. He decides they will all return to Europe for several months. Upon their return, they find the town in an upheaval over a Hindu fortune teller, Dal and RALPH TRUMAN take Billy and Nyda to his suite. He tells Billy she is marry a man whose description fits Dal Romanine. Nyda returns from her experience with terror-stricken face. Ralph says he believes the man has an accomplice in the town and when the Hindu and Dal disappear simultaneously, Billy remembers these words.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII
"His accomplice?" Billy's suddenly dry lips could hardly form the words. "Sure!" Nyda nodded, her glittering black eyes again racing down the paragraphs of the front page story. "Ralph Truman was dead right. They got the goods on him all right. It says here that a self-appointed committee of representative citizens—that's Ralph Truman's work, of course—managed to install a dictaphone in Namir Sadi's private sanctum, and it made records of his telephone conversations, at least of his end of the conversations, and they got him dead to rights. His accomplice—"

"Who was—his—accomplice?" Billy's tongue was still almost paralyzed by that nameless fear. His—she could not even utter Dal's name to herself—his going away so suddenly, so mysteriously had nothing to do with this expose of Namir Sadi—

"It doesn't say," Nyda answered. "All they know is that he did have an accomplice, some society man, they think, who wormed his way into the confidence of everyone of importance and tipped off Namir Sadi so he could scare the life out of the suckers who came to get their fortune told. Some swell scheme, believe me!" She abandoned her effort to enlighten Billy and read on interrupting her readings with exclamations of pleased horror. "Say, Winnie, the Holden divorce suit was caused by Namir Sadi! I told you so! Sadi got the low-down on Bert Holden—it says here—and when Holden refused to pay up, Sadi spilled the beans to Mrs. Holden, and she sued Bert for a divorce."

"But—I don't understand," Billy pleaded. "Please let me see the paper. How did he work his scheme?"

Winnie volunteered to enlighten her. "Why, it was as simple as A-B-C. This accomplice of Namir Sadi's would call the fake up two or three times a day, find out what appointments Sadi had made, then the accomplice would give him the dope on them over the phone. If he didn't have anything on them, except harmless stuff, he'd try to get something hot before Sadi saw them; and if he couldn't, or they weren't important enough, Sadi would just string 'em along and no harm done."

"Oh, my God!" Nyda breathed, fear blanching her cheeks. "It says they found a book with every one of his appointments listed in it, and under each name all the dope he'd got on them. The district attorney says there's no doubt he was all set for the biggest blackmail campaign anyone ever pulled off in this man's town." She read on, her hands trembling so that the paper rattled. "Oh, it's all right," she breathed with prayerful thankfulness. "The district attorney says the book will be kept under lock and key in his own office. He says that nobody but him will ever see it. He ought to destroy it! Good Lord, think of what might happen in this town if some crook got hold of it!"

"How did Namir Sadi escape?" Billy asked, her own breath coming more easily.

"Why, they raided his place last night, thinking they'd bag him," Nyda explained. "but he must have been tipped off right at the last minute. Some secret passage, I guess," she concluded with relish.

"A secret passage in a modern apartment house?" Billy grinned. "Don't be foolish!"

"Well, anyone—now you see him and now you don't! He didn't have time to open his safe and take what money he had on hand and the black book. They found seven hundred dollars in the safe, but of course he had a fortune stashed away somewhere, safe and sound. They didn't find a trace of him. They ought to have had the place surrounded by the police," she added fiercely. "The books! It's just like Ralph Truman to make a mess of it!"

"Maybe," Winnie suggested slyly, with a keen glance at Nyda's still pale face. "It's better for—a good many people that Namir Sadi will not be brought to trial in Colfax. He might sling a few hot ones from the witness stand."

"Maybe it is," Nyda agreed.

The Namir Sadi scandal occupied front page space for three or four days, then, for lack of fresh developments, slipped into oblation. Almost no one could be found who would appear before the district attorney and make accusations against the fugitive swiftheer, and, true to his promise to the unweary public, the district attorney did not make use of the famous "black book" to force cooperation with his office on the part of

Meadows told her brightly. "I seldom hear from him, but he always mentions you—in a way that makes me quite sorry that I am too old ever to enjoy romance, again myself."

That was a grain of comfort for the lovesick girl, but it could not satisfy her indefinitely. Early in January, after a rather quiet Christmas celebration in the Curtis house, Winnie announced that she had accepted an invitation to spend a week in the winter camp of the Claiborne, friends whom she had made during the year but who seldom came to the Curtis mansion. It was entirely by accident that Billy discovered that the lovely little blond had not been with the Claibornes at all.

It was Bruce Kruger, who had really been at the Claiborne camp for a week of winter sports, who quite innocently revealed that Winnie had not been in the party. It was impossible for Billy to confront the girl, who had returned from her mysterious trip with a deeply satisfied glow in her shallow blue eyes, with her knowledge of Winnie's deceit. She feared to pry, lest she learn something that would blast the dearest hope she had in the world.

She could not even be sure that Winnie was hearing from Dal, too, but Viola, the maid, hinted broadly until Billy shut her up. As long as she did not know—

The thirty-first anniversary of the founding of the Curtis Store was a very different celebration than that of the year before. The three girls attended the big party, dressed very quietly, their jewelry discreetly looked in the safe in the old millionaire's library. Not even Lella Sampson was her old cordial self to Billy, and many of the salesmen were openly hostile to the "Cinderella girls."

T. Q. tried to pretend that everything was as it had always been, but after the party he sat for two long hours in his library, brooding, thinking remorseful, self-torturing thoughts. The three girls sensed his depression, could not settle down to sleep while he sat there, casting up accounts and, as they all uneasily suspected, judging them, weighing them, possibly rejecting all three of them.

During these months of Dal's absence Billy had practically withdrawn from the strange contest to ingratiate herself in the old man's favor, if indeed she had ever actively entered it. But Nyda and Winnie had not abated their efforts in the slightest. Winnie had been spending many hours a week with him in his library, typing his letters, cuddling against him as he read and corrected them. And Nyda, warned by intuition that he had penetrated her pretense of caring for children, had thrown herself into her work at the school for kindergarten teachers with what looked like a fanatical zeal.

At two o'clock Billy rose, threw a negligee over her nightgown and slipped out of her room, her heart aching with pity for the lonely old man in the library below. She would find something to say to him that would comfort him, she resolved, forgetting completely, for the first time in months, the pain of her longing for Dal Romanine in her sincere affection and pity for the man who had tried to do so much for three ungrateful girls.

As she slipped noiselessly past Nyda's door she heard a low rumble of a man's voice, arguing, demanding, beating down Nyda's subdued but almost hysterical words—words which Billy could not distinguish, for honor sent her hurrying back to her own room. After she had got back into bed, she lay there shivering with nervousness and fear, fear of some nameless, dreadful calamity that would involve all of them—the old man brooding in the library, terror-haunted Nyda Lomax, scheming little Winnie, and—herself.

FINISH EXAMINATIONS OF SCHOOL CHILDREN

Examinations of children in every grade school in the city were concluded Thursday by physicians, assisted by the city school nurses, Miss Mary L. Orblson and Miss Jane Barclay. The examinations were started several weeks ago and included only a superficial inspection by the doctors. They intended to reveal defects and children were asked to see their family physicians for treatment. Notes were sent to parents on defects discovered in the children.

This number of pupils examined was not known Friday by the nurses, but a report will be made soon, they stated. Each grade from the first through the sixth was taken for examination, and most of the children were examined with the exception of those whose parents did not wish it or who were absent from school when the examination of that school was made.

GETS 2ND DIVORCE IN TWELVE MONTHS FROM SAME HUSBAND

Mrs. Mary Heinz' Effort to Be Reconciled With Husband Results in Disaster

Charging cruel and inhuman treatment, Mrs. Mary Heinz, Appleton, Friday was granted the second divorce from George J. Heinz within a year by Judge Edgar V. Werner in circuit court. She was awarded some property in Appleton and the custody of three minor children, as well as the costs of the action.

She instituted the first action against her husband last July in municipal court, alleging cruel and inhuman treatment. The divorce was granted July 30, 1926, when she was awarded $1,500.

About Feb. 9, 1927, the couple reached a reconciliation, effected on the condition that the defendant refrain from using coarse, vulgar, and ungentlemanly conduct toward her, and the divorce order was vacated.

Returning to her home, she hoped several large debts, but despite this aid and his promise to treat her properly, he continued his cruel and inhuman treatment, she alleged in her last action. He called her vile names, even in the presence of their children, and manufactured and sold illicit intoxicating liquor, thereby attracting undesirable persons to their home, she charged in the complaint.

Once when her husband was intoxicated he hit her on the shoulder, the complaint stated. Complaining about his conduct, she was told that she could not leave the home if she did not like it, it was alleged.

Two divorces also were granted in municipal court by Judge Fred V. Heinemann, sitting for Judge Theodore Berg. Alleging desertion, Albert Maertz, New London, was given a divorce from Mrs. Anna Maertz, who he married June 15, 1910, in Chicago. The couple lived in Chicago about two months when the husband went to New London to establish a home. After he had the home prepared, his wife refused to join him, deserting him. In August, 1910, according to the complaint, she left her home from her husband and does not know her present address, he alleged.

Joseph A. Sherburne, Appleton, was granted a divorce from Mrs. Bertha Sherburne for desertion. Married in Appleton in November, 1888, the wife deserted her husband in September, 1916, it was alleged by the plaintiff. Prior to that time the plaintiff deeded his real estate to her, the complaint stated. Six children, five of whom are living, were born to the couple. They all are grown up. Mrs. Sherburne now is in California, the husband believes.

HEADS OF ASYLUMS LEARN HOW STATE OPERATES PRISONS

Delegates and Visitors Spend Friday Visiting Green Bay Reformatory

One hundred twenty-five members of the Association of Trusting, Superintendents and Matrons of County Asylums for the Chronic Insane of Wisconsin, in annual convention the past three days here were guests of the State Board of Control and the superintendent, E. K. Eklund, at the Wisconsin State Reformatory at Green Bay Friday.

The guests arrived at the reformatory at 10:30 in the forenoon and were addressed by Mr. Eklund on the recreational, educational, vocational, and religious program at the reformatory.

After Mr. Eklund's address, the guests were conducted through the institution to the auditorium where a short business and speaking program was carried out. Henry Fisher, Jefferson, treasurer of the association, presented his report and a committee on resolutions consisting of J. D. Christie, Nora V. Livingston and P. M. Smith introduced resolutions that were adopted by the convention. The speakers were John J. Hanson, president of the State Board of Control, Harriet E. Grim, vice president, Grant C. Haas, and Glen Householder, supervising farmer of state institutions.

In a talk on farming at the state reformatory, Mr. Householder indicated that the management in an unpretentious and inexpensive way that may be duplicated by the average farmer, is attempting to raise as much as possible of the farm products consumed in the institution. The plan is to raise enough hogs to permit the dressing of one each day and enough steers to dress one each week. In order to raise additional pasture and to afford feed for cattle, the reformatory is clearing a 308 acre tract of land in Oneida.

In the operation of the dairy, the reformatory had been using a herd of grades and pure breeds but has been gradually changing to pure breeds.

While Mr. Householder is very much in favor of pure bred herds of cattle on the farms of state and county institutions, he believes that an abrupt change from grades to pure breeds is expensive and unwise. He recommends the gradual change that all successful breeders of pure bred animals have made.

One of the aims of the state reformatory there is one exception to the rule of raising only the products needed for the institution. This exception has to do with the raising of vegetables for canning purposes. A much larger quantity of vegetables is raised and put up by a nearby canning institution than is used for local consumption. The surplus is sold to other state institutions.

"LITTLE ADVENTURES"

Said to be one of the most captivating picture comedies of the year. "The Little Adventures" will be on view at the Fischer theatre Sunday.

Fresh from her outstanding triumph in "Corporal Kate," Vera Reynolds plays the title role in this amusing story of a spitting married couple and the unusual events which transpire during a week end in the rural retreat of a wealthy bachelor. In the role of a charming artist, who, under the romantic spell of love-at-first-sight, elopes with a married man, Miss Reynolds is said to have a delineation ideally suited to her piquant personality.

Victor Varconi, who scored so convincingly in "The Volga Boatman," and who since recently was seen opposite Marie Prevost in "For Wives Only," has the male lead in support of Miss Reynolds, his role being that of a bachelor happy in his bachelorhood. Phyllis Haver is seen as the spitting wife of Robert Oher, who plays the husband who spits back. Theodore Kosloff also has an important character ization, that of a theatrical and affected young actor.

CLARA BOW SKILLS AS DANCER IN LATEST COMEDY!

An amusement park fortune-teller informed her that fame and fortune were to be found as a dancer—so she staged a "boxing ballet," called the act "Rough House Rosie and Her Six Loughnecks" and—was a success from the start! That's one of the side-lights discovered in Clara Bow's new Paramount starring vehicle "Jough House Rosie," now showing at the Fischer Theatre.

The star is an east side girl, who falls in love with a handsome prize-fighter but temporarily deserts him for a society scion. The latter offers her wealth, culture and all the things which her fiance doesn't possess. Naturally, she has a hard time deciding who her true love really is and in the interim, laughs, thrills and dramatic punches pile up—all culminating in a big smash at the middleweight championship bout.

Read Hovey heads Miss Bow's cast. Hovey's face is familiar to millions of persons throughout the world by reason of certain collar and cigarette advertisements for which he posed before coming to Hollywood.

NEW CROOK PICTURE SCORES WITHOUT MELODRAMA

"Obey the Law," a Columbia picture starring Bert Lytell, which opens at the New Bijou Monday for three days has been hailed by screen critics as a new type of crook film. It is a picture without bloodshed, and red melodrama but what it lacks in physical violence is made up in mental shrewdness, depth of plot and suspense.

Lytell, as the super-crook, already has won renown as the most gifted screen analyst of supercrook roles who ever shrugged his way through a tiring celluloid ordeal. He has the support of such notable players as Lucienne Gilbert, Edna Murphy, Larry Kent, William Welsh, Hedda Hopper and Sarah Eadden.

The story was based on the special sketch by Max Marcin and it serves the dual purpose of contending silently, yet effectively, that it pays to be honest; and, also it provides an intense hour of interesting amusement.

Lytell appears as a superior sort of prince in the kingdom of the underworld; the sort who, in other days, would have rivaled Robin Hood. And, while the character is a likable sort, he has to pay the final penalty. There is no false hero worship, and no senti-

Inflicting Wounds on Two

New London—F. S. Rhodes proprietor of the Snow White Sunday, was arrested and lodged in the local jail as the result of a stabbing affray which occurred on S. Pearl-st in front of the Woftrath soft drink parlor Friday evening.

Rhodes, who had been previously put out of Woftrath's establishment, appeared again about 6 o'clock and was seen by the convalling a knife in his sleeve. He conceived Woftrath in an argument, it is alleged finally making attempt to stab him, making a slight cut on the face. Harlow Babcock of Northport, who was passing at the time, quitted the engaged man. However, Rhodes continued to lather in the vicinity and renewed his affray again about 7 o'clock. This time he inflicted a severe gash on his victim's hand.

The car was occupied by two men between the ages of 30 and 40 years and a young woman of about 22 years who spoke with a southern accent. Herbert Hurme, manager of the station, took the license number and immediately called the police.

FIND LONG LOST RING

Twenty-five years ago, about the time that Charles Larson started wearing long pants, he was playing ball in a field on the Soren Jensen farm in the town of Lind. He had a new watch and a new gold ring, and asked another boy, who was watching the ball game to hold them. After he was through playing he asked for the watch and the ring. The boy gave him the watch but said he had lost the ring. A search of several hours did not bring it to light, and as time went on, the matter was forgotten.

One day this week Paul Pope was plowing this same field. Nearby was Mrs. Pope, and she saw something shine in the newly plowed ground and picked it up. It was a gold ring, and then she remembered having heard some of the Jensen family speak of Charles Larson having lost a ring in this field years ago. Mr. Larson, who is employed at the McLean market in this city, was called and told about the ring having been found. He identified the ring as his own. The field in which the ring has been found has been plowed nearly every year for the past 25 years.

TRAINING CAMP MEN TO BE GIVEN TICKETS

A new plan regarding transportation of young men to citizen's military training camps will be adopted this summer in place of the regular rate of 5 cents a mile to the camp and return, according to notice received by Louis P. O. Koecher, county enrollment officer, from the adjutant general of the army. The Appleton and Outagamie-co boys who will attend Fort Sheridan this summer will be issued railroad tickets for their transportation.

It is said that the government will benefit in cheaper excursion rates and that the new plan will stop the practice known as hitch-hiking.

In other years many local boys saved the railroad allowance by using their own cars, motorcycles, bicycles and in getting lifts to or from the camps. The money saved in this manner fattened their supply for sodas, candy and movies.

Besides being a measure of economy, it is stated, the parents of the boys will be assured that the transportation to the camp will be safe and danger from road accidents will be less probable.

Brandt, Maxine Fraser, Ruth Plaman, Walter Roffke, Viola Schlimm, Evelyn Stallman, Helen Totzke, sophomores—Alice Louise Ford, Eunith Kirsch, Lenore Maluer, Eleanor Peters, Lucille Roesch, Agnes Schubert, Gladys Shauger, Charlotte Tracy, Irene Zimmerman.

RESCIND LICENSE RECENTLY GRANTED TO POWER COMPANY

Believe Plans to Build Dam Across Wolf River Will Be Abandoned

A license granted to the Wisconsin Power company for a power project on the Wolf river in Shawano-co. on Nov. 17, 1926, was rescinded, the license cancelled, and the application restored to the status of an application pending, according to word received by Congressman George J. Schneider Friday morning from the Federal Power commission at Washington, D. C.

The license authorized the power company to build a power dam across the Wolf river several miles below the Menominee Indian reservation at Keshena. Preparations to start the work probably will be abandoned now that the license is revoked. It is thought the action of the Power commission is due to the violent objection to the license made by the Indians of Menominee tribes and by sportsmen and nature lovers of the entire state.

The same company has a permit to make a survey of the Wolf river within the reservation to determine the power possibilities there.

Congressman Schneider recently made a trip to the reservation where he held conferences with leaders of the Indian tribes on this matter. The Indians are opposed to the development of any power on the dam, he reported.

The power company, is listed as a Wisconsin corporation, is really controlled by the Insull Power interests of Chicago, it is said. This company declares that the development of power on the reservation will be of great benefit to the Indians financially. The Indians, however, are of the opinion that the thousands of tourists attracted to the reservation each year by the natural beauty of the territory will bring as great a revenue as the power development. They further point out that they would be the losers as well as the people of the entire state if the natural beauty spots would be destroyed.

The Wisconsin Power company hoped to develop power dams at Sullivan falls, Smoky falls, the Delis, Big Tidy falls, Keshena falls, Bear Trap falls and By Smoky Falls.

The cancelled license gave the company the right to build a dam several miles above Shawano. While this dam was not on the Indian reservation it would back the water up into the reservation, flooding many acres of Indian land. The company had agreed to pay for the damage caused by backing of the water and to pay a yearly rental.

Work on the project which the Federal commission had approved was delayed by the state of Wisconsin which contended that no power dam could be built without a state permit.

Congressman Schneider has declared that since the Indians and the people of Wisconsin were opposed to the development of power on the Wolf river, he would do all in his power to prevent any further activities along this line.
